

STUDYING POLITICAL SCIENTISTS

AN OPEN & GLOBAL WORKSHOP ON METHODOLOGY
ORGANIZED BY THE RC33 (THE STUDY OF POLITICAL SCIENCE AS A DISCIPLINE)

THE STUDY OF
POLITICAL SCIENCE
AS A DISCIPLINE

Date: December 9, 2022

Organizer: Mehtap Söyler

Co-organizer: Paulo Ravecca (RC33 Chair)

Presenters (in order of appearance)

Giulia Vicentini is Assistant Professor in Political Science and Public Policy at the University of Napoli Parthenope. She holds a PhD in Comparative Politics at the University of Siena and post doc positions at the Universities of Trento, Scuola Normale Superiore, Bologna and Padova. Her research interest range between party politics, candidate and leadership selection, elite studies, higher education policies, sustainable development, and energy policies. She worked as project manager and research assistant for the EU COST project PROSEPS (Professionalization and Social Impact of European Political Science).

Gabriella Ilonszki is Professor at Budapest's Corvinus University. Her field of interest is comparative politics focusing on Central and Eastern Europe. She has published extensively on parliaments, parties and elites in more than ten books and in several dozens of research articles.

Gábor Tamás Molnár is PhD Candidate in Political Science and Assistant Lecturer at Corvinus University of Budapest's Department of Public Policy, where he is also coordinator of the MSc in Public Policy and Management program. His teaching focuses on institutional analysis, social science methodology, and public economics. His main research interests are the institutionalization and governance roles of professional communities (including political science communities), and policy advice.

Pablo Bulcourf is Professor and researcher at the Universidad Nacional de Quilmes and the Universidad de Buenos Aires. Senior consultant for the United Nations Development Program. He has been general secretary of the Sociedad Argentina de Análisis Político (SAAP). He is one of the coordinators of the Research Group on "History of Political Science" of the Asociación Latinoamericana de Ciencia Política (ALACIP).

Nelson Cardozo has a Master's degree in Public Administration (UBA). Lecturer and researcher at the Universidad Argentina de la Empresa (UADE) and the Universidad de Buenos Aires (UBA). His topics of interest are pension reforms in Latin America; development, methodologies, theories, and teaching of public policies in the region. Co-chair of the Comparative Public Policy Research Committee (GIPPC) of the Latin American Association of Political Science (ALACIP).

Emily Hauptmann is Professor of Political Science at Western Michigan University. Her research focuses on the effects of private and public funding on what political scientists study and how they study it.

Recently published:

Foundations and American Political Science \(ku.edu\)

Work in progress:

"Standing Out or Looking for Cover? Strategies for Defending Public Funding for the Social Sciences in the US"

"Political Education, Imperial and Domestic: The Intertwined Histories of the US Philippine Commission and UC Berkeley's Political Science Department"

Danusa Marques is Professor of Political Science and Director of the Institute of Political Science at the University of Brasília - UnB (Brasília, Brazil). Editor of Political Science at Revista Brasileira de Ciências Sociais (Brazilian Social Sciences Review). Researcher at Flora Tristán Research Center, with investigations on political elites, elections, gender relations, and the development of Political Science in Brazil.

Marcia Rangel Candido is Postdoctoral Researcher at the Institute of Social and Political Studies (IESP) of the State University of Rio de Janeiro (UERJ). Assistant editor of DADOS - Journal of Social Sciences. Her thesis, which dealt with gender inequalities in the institutionalization of Political Science in Brazil, received the prize for the best thesis defended at IESP-UERJ in 2021. The work was also a finalist in the ANPOCS thesis contest, which evaluates all postgraduate research defended in Brazil in Social Sciences.

Mehtap Söyler is Associate Professor at Izmir Katip Celebi University. She has a Ph.D. in Political Science from the Berlin Graduate School of Social Sciences at Humboldt University of Berlin. Her book "The Turkish Deep State" focuses on case study method and theory generation. Her research interests are social science methodology, democratization, civil-military relations, political institutions, and political science as a discipline.

Supported by:

